A few days after this article was published, TikTok announced in response to these concerns that it is conducting an audit of all accounts with unpaid subscription fees. As of April 2019, various media outlets reported that TikTok had managed to identify tens of millions of accounts which were involved in posting content on the platform without having paid for it. The publication also reported that the video service was working with legal and other experts to help recommend steps which could be taken against people who had posted content without paying for it. A representative for TikTok told a news outlet that "We are always taking measures to ensure our community is able to enjoy the best TikTok experience possible. When we identify that an account has been using features without paying subscriptions, we interrupt services so they can upgrade. We also work closely with our legal team to take action against all accounts that don't comply with our Terms of Use.";

You might think of Q4 2017 as a "transition" quarter. For the first time, Bytedance accounted for all of its mobile monetization businesses (which this report is about)—QQ.com (China), Musical.ly (U.S.), Toutiao and Jinri Toutiao (China). It also counted all of its employees in one location—Beijing, China. We're going to do a deep dive into the business models and revenue sources for these mobile businesses next week."

In another article published on The Guardian, TikTok was criticized for its lack of a privacy policy and transparency about how it uses users' data. "TikTok's chief marketing officer, Ed Wu, told Forbes the app has more than 200m monthly active users and that it is 'very transparent' about how it uses data for targeting advertising. However, he did not respond to questions about whether the app has a privacy policy and users were unable to find one in their apps because there isn't one. When asked about how long the company keeps users' data, Wu said in an emailed statement that it's 'subject to our internal policies and applicable law.'";

Musical.ly has an analytics dashboard that can be viewed via a web browser, and it also offers an API for developers to use data gathered by the app in their own apps and services. Musical.ly went live on the European market on 25 September 2015 under the name Musical.ly Alternatives, with a broader focus on Musical.ly's provided content being a secondary concern."

When you open TikTok app, you will see the feed of your friends and videos. You can also create your own stories and upload videos to them. To access these Stories, you need to select "Create Story" option. You can tell us about your life events and how you feel."
